#Ferguson: A Year Later

by Talk2Q (8.15.15)

Last week, I found myself in the St. Louis area on business. I decided that since it was only a 20 minute drive to Ferguson that I at least wanted to see the city to see what it was like. I had no idea that I would leave with an empty feeling inside.

Arriving in the city didn't feel like arriving in any other city. All of the stories in the media over the past year and has turned Ferguson into somewhat of a "haunted house" type of feel. You're looking around as if to expect to see something "pop off."

But as I drove through the city, I didn't see media vans and cameras. I didn't see any protesters (most protests occurred during the evening and I was there during the morning). The city appeared just like any other city. There did appear to be tension in the air just from some of the locals we came into contact with, but for the most part, just another day in an everyday city.

We thought about just turning around and leaving, but then I decided to pull over and Google the Mike Brown incident. I wanted to learn more about where it occurred. Maybe we were on the wrong side of town and the commotion that we see each night on TV is elsewhere. That's when I came across the street name where Mike Brown was shot. It was about a 10 minute drive from where we were.

(Right click and open link in new tab to zoom)

I wasn't aware of the memorial dedicated to Mike Brown. When I drove down the street where everything happened, I was actually surprised to come up on it so quickly. There was very little traffic at the time and the few cars that did drive by did so slowly.

Four kids, no older than 12 years old, came walking by the memorial. They barely looked at it as they crossed the street and said "hello" to us on their way into their apartment. I didn't want to ask them if they knew Mike Brown or not, but somehow I knew that they did. What did the memorial mean to them? Did it make them hate cops more or did it make them fear cops more? Did they look at Mike Brown as some sort of martyr for allegedly standing up to an officer or did they look at him as a troubled kid who took things too far?

Once I drove past the memorial, I pulled over to get a closer look at some items placed on the side of the road. This is where I felt the bottom of my stomach drop. I saw stuffed animals with names written on their shirts:

- Aiyana Jones, a 7-year old killed in a police raid in Detroit.
- Tamir Rice, a 12-year old killed on a playground in Cleveland with a toy gun.
- Sandra Bland, a 28-year old arrested for resisting arrest despite never being initially charged with a crime.

There has to be another way for cops to do their jobs without incidents like these. Why does everything have to end in tragedy? At one time, being a black man made you feel like prey, but I never imagined that feeling would extend to black women and black children.

If you've read my blog long enough then you know that I have no tolerance for criminals. But you also know that I believe in the punishment fitting the crime. We'll never know if Mike Brown actually tried to harm that officer on that day because he's not here to tell his story. A lot of people have not gotten to tell their stories because they are dead.

As we left Ferguson, we were silent for a good 20 minutes. However, before we got outside of the city limits, we saw two kids walking down the street and it made us wonder if they would make it home that day. So many never did.

We all have problems. Things come up in our lives that tend to take over our very being. You can't let that happen. Don't let your problems become the center of every day that you live. Doing so will cause people to identify you with whatever struggles that you may have.

Life was designed for us to have problems. It's true that some have a lot more than others, but that's beside the point. Problems are supposed to be temporary. There's a way out of every problem that society has ever known. It may not be easily achieved, but there is a way even if the odds aren't in your favor.

Be the one who overcame. Be the one who survived. Be the one who defied the odds and made something out of nothing. It's your life. Your destiny. Let your struggles mold you and not control you.

diet which, as intended, demands a further host of emotions from the unaware person, that an event – such as Theft – perhaps the highest on the list of choice emotive replacements for the defense – might have (once) and/or has (often) occurred. Dependence, it seems, oddly enough, is the second and most lasting because it is a pathway that suggests completion of the pathway for the selected emotion – or nerve function – has been achieved. Once the nerve pathway is triggered successfully, a persistent recollection that a “memory” indicative of Theft as a motive, could, no matter how dormant the bond of Fraternal Trust and its co-function of Love in the mating and mated pair is, confidence in the relationship is seductively upset or rendered unwholesome – leading to other tangible socio-economic despairs such as Laziness and its anti-competitive host(s) – a Punishment/Reward syndrome that – most troubling of all – co-competitively supports unmanageable illicit drug use and abuse. This depressant-stimulant marriage is perhaps what has been noted by psychological case managers in those who seem ODD – where the professional report on survey denotes that an illustrated absurdity, noted and true without resort to congregation – where the affected is also a conventional or stereotypical illicit drug dependent – exists without ameliorative attempt to over-develop any additional/optional fluency required for this assessment.

The addictive co-factors, however in this coping mechanism requires complete incapacitation of the individual, at last, due to the chemical pathway to toxicity which has been obscured in the combined use by the more over-active drug(s) of choice (physical/emotional masking) which is shared of the persistent scheme

Stagnant blood is the result. EARTH and METAL can no longer react. AIR is lost. On the opposite end, however, remains the potentially correct proposition that too many early exposures to these spices (not peppers alone) can lead to, in their absence, a feeling of mistrust for the meal should the spice be removed – which leads to Anxiety and a loss of Appreciation for work under consideration and/or performed. Cumulatively, these physical indicators can be mistaken for the possibility of hexing or witchery (asymptomatic high-blood-pressure), food poisoning, or home sickness if the individual is not aware that Happiness and/or Sedation are the truer elements of Safety that, co-conspiratorially produce a remedy for the "toxin(s)" in quest(ion) for redress of a/this presumed and/or noted loss.

Therapeutic messages released by these processes can, as a result, cause the affected individual to swoon slightly without impairment or loss of consciousness while proactive solutions to physical deficiencies and/or other abnormalities (psychic stress where an individual's emotional qi is not centered) are selected for from among the values under unconscious consideration for conscious approval. Expect, from these restorations, to develop more fully in the refinement of new skills which are absolutely necessary to the individual for to defend against a relapse into the set of circumstances now known to have potentially produced an undesired state of living as a result of long exposure to real world toxicities and/or paranormal activity which have, heretofore, hitchhiked along, undetected and/or not rationalized, with the conspicuous remedies to self-preservation – known to remove a person from danger – and, too, those unconscious, biologically supported suppositions (intra- and interspecies psychic examination) concurrent to intuitive self-investigation and therapy. Some people actually require Black Pepper because of early childhood exposure – a known source of imprinting – where Trust usually becomes the most feasible alternative affirmation in the emotional pathway that has been excited. Jealous solidarity – natural, conventional communism – also Reward – are the usual indicators of this type of addiction (commencement). Spiritual and/or metaphysical considerations imply that these people are, individually, more likely to get his/her way. Be careful. To render this more possible, however, the mission must become one where the person does not attempt to satisfy their distant, correlative goals – not obscured – but not addressed – but generally well-known because they are common values. Wait patiently for a/the accusation of trying – from those who are impatient without cause – and then do not (over)react. Free rotation to a remedy should be (are) the only qualified actions which remain when the opposition is no doubt – "hustling" (. . . Signing . . .) – on top of circumstancing (posturing) /remaining/being, himself, physically conspiratorial, with a known absolutism (seeking) or relevancy (policing) known as, or supported by intimidation (history)

big prize is well, just fun to watch!! There was something about watching young eager business men and women fight for a real job! I miss those episodes but when Donald introduced the Celebrity version, well it surpassed the first. And isn't that what Donald Trump is all about? Surpassing what he has done before? Even when he suffered "rough" patches in his real estate career, that is if you can consider losing millions to a billionaire a rough patch, he still managed to come back with a vengeance. He's a great business man. And he reinvented himself into a great entertainer. I mean the man made it interesting to watch other people get FIRED!! Hell people signed up to get Fired by the great and powerful Donald! You're Fired became a household phrase and we loved the cold hearted way he did it too. When the show was between seasons we loved the way Donald kept firing AT people with his all-knowing no holds barred attitude and mouth.

He sometimes said the things we were all thinking or he would say it such a way that you wish you had the balls to say things. He was the ultimate Politically Incorrect person we all loved to hate. Whether he was tearing into Rosie O'Donnell or Obama. I mean who knew people were actually BORN in Hawaii? We all thought it was just a really large resort. Just like who actually LIVES in Vegas? It's like living at Disneyland! I mean do they rent out apartments in the Princess Palace? But Surely I jest. It's all in fun. All in Donald Fun. We laugh at it. We wonder what's Donald going to say now? but it was just entertainment right? Even when he came at the President of the fucking United States, did we really take him seriously?? It's just Donald Trump. He's like that crazy uncle who gets drunk at the barbecues and family gatherings and dances wildly and tells the most inappropriate jokes. But you invite him because you know he makes the party fun! And soon he'll be passed out by the pool or in the guest bedroom. And what harm has he done anyway besides just caused us to laugh? But what if that crazy inappropriate uncle decides to formulate his jokes into a run for the Mayor of your town? Now he's going from the backyard to the town hall steps for all to see. There was no harm when the crazy uncle was performing in front of family and friends but now he's up there shouting to the whole damned town? Getting in the papers? And now the whole town and a few cities over will know that it's YOUR crazy uncle? That's a horse of a different color.

Donald Trump has taken his funny, interesting, inappropriate antics from TMZ to the WORLD. The World is watching. Leaders of other countries are watching. The next president of the United States may be one of our great mouth piece entertainer? And we're all ok with this? His numbers are not dropping. He's got a real shot at becoming the Republican candidate! Now just think about that for a moment. I mean really THINK ABOUT THAT. Yes Reagan was an actor who became The President. But Reagan was also Governor of Texas.

He spent his time in the political arena at least. So are we by passing the experience part and just going for the entertainment piece? Many have said that the President is just a figure head but don't be fooled the president does have power. Think back to George W. Bush who told everyone that he was the president and he will do whatever the fuck he wants to do. And he did!! What do you think Donald Trump will do? You may think that immigration will be his only debacle but I'm not thinking Mexico, I'm thinking The Middle East, I'm thinking North Korea. And let me remind you that those leaders are not laughing they're watching and they're waiting. They're waiting for the American People to be the orchestra of our own demise. So stop choosing the sexiest, the most entertaining, the popular kid with the famous last name and start getting real. Pick candidates, from either side, who has held real jobs in the government, who has a fucking law degree, who has served in the military, or just for kicks one who knows what the fuck they are talking about. Or the next time you hear the phrase YOU'RE FIRED it will just be FIRE!!

Not so much the type of liar who tries to scheme something out of you. But the type of liar who will tell you what you want to hear knowing that they have no intention of following up. I hate it when someone says that they're going to do something knowing that they're not going to make an attempt at all. I am a man of my word and I absolutely do not say I'm going to do something without doing it (barring some emergency). Lord knows that I've dealt with my share of people who don't subscribe to the same theory though.

The second thing that I've learned is that: women lie just as much as men. And they're not as good at it as they may have once been historically. Lying is definitely no longer a "man thing" in 2015. From the lies told on Facebook to the lies told in reality, so many women appear to be in some invisible competition that requires them to act more than what they are. Sometimes I look at some of the things that my lady FB friends post and think to myself, "Doesn't she know that some of her friends know her in real life?"

But the pressure of 5,000 "friends" will drive some people to do so many things just to maintain their online reputation. Even if it soils their real life reputation.

I guess all I can do is try to sort out the good from the bad. I understand that not everyone is honest and that some lies aren't meant to be harmful (telling someone with a messed up hairstyle that it "looks good" to avoid hurting their feelings).

Lying may be a necessary evil in some situations. But to what I would guess is a majority of American citizens, it's not that big of a deal to lie to someone you know or don't know just to get some sort of

by Talk2Q

Hear me out before jumping to conclusions over my eye-catching title. I'm definitely not saying that fellas out there should resort to dog-like tactics and abandon doing the right thing when it comes to women. I just wanted to share a perspective that one of my Facebook friends posted.

I have never really considered this particular perspective before, but when I truly considered what was being said, it made a lot of sense to me.

Here's the post:

FYI: Guys please go sit down with that a woman don't want a good man mess/excuse when she's just not interested in you... First of all just because "you" perceive yourself to be a good man doesn't mean that's what I see... Everyone's definition of good is different... Second of all even if you are a good man doesn't mean we would be good together.... Therefore, I would suggest that you take your good arse, on your good way and have a good day!!

??????? Everyone feels that they are a good catch in some way! GTFOH!!! Oh yes Happy Sunday!!

Simple and to the point. Now, I don't know what prompted her post, but it hit home with me after I considered what was being conveyed. I've always been respectful, giving, honest, etc. Things that a lot of women say that they want in a man. But, I lost sight of the fact that it doesn't guarantee me anything. No one owes me a date or anything simply because of how I evaluate myself.

I see on it TV as well as read tweets and posts of women who say "all I want is a good man." And I bought into that and took it at face value. A mistake that I'll not make again. There's more to the statement that's left unsaid. "All I want is a good man... who is (insert height here) or (insert size here) or (insert style/swag here) or (insert career here), etc." To me, that's what is not being said when that statement is being made.

And you know what? There's absolutely nothing wrong with that! We all want what we want. Countless times in my life, I've shied away from certain women because I didn't like how they dressed, I didn't like how they spoke, or maybe they just weren't attractive to me. There are a number of reasons all of us pass up on someone who may actually be a nice person, but they just don't do it for us for some reason.

As a guy, it's very hard to admit that a lady just may not be into you. Especially when you feel as if you have the world to offer her. A lot of us want to justify how we select our mates yet criticize why others don't select us. That's just simply unfair.

So, I thank Kandi for opening my eyes to something that I've never considered. You don't blame a person for not seeing you the way that you see yourself. If it's something about you that she doesn't like that you can change, then fix it. If it's something about you that you can't change, then just find someone who has more of an appreciation for whatever that is. Either way, being a good guy means nothing if a woman just isn't into you.

Affection is better than Perfection

by Talk2Q

She's 5'2" and curvy in all of the right places. As a matter of fact, she looks like the number 8 in high heels. Her lips would make a lollipop shed a tear of joy from anticipation. Full and soft to the touch. Her hair is soft, silky and shoulder length. Her cat-like hazel eyes can mesmerize anyone bold enough to stare too long at them. She is the epitome of a Perfect 10... but she has no concept of how to handle a significant other. None whatsoever.

Dag.

In today's society where hot bods are pushed to us ad nauseum on social media and on television, it's easy to get caught up on a person's looks. As a guy who stays on the go, I encounter good-looking women quite often. Some of them are single, too. But spend up to 15 minutes or so talking to them and you will quickly find out why that is the case.

Yet it's still so tempting to ask them out. In my mind, I know that she's selfish and has no clue of how to love me, but there are many factors that will compel me to ask her out:

- 1) She's hot. 'Nuff said.
- 2) My friends would think that I'm a rock star to bring a nugget like her around.
- 3) That fantasy in my head that she'll figure it all out and become the "perfect woman."

Well, there's no such thing as the perfect woman (or man) for that matter. However, there is a such thing as finding someone who is "perfect for you." It's all about figuring out who cares for you more than anything else. Beauty fades and with that being said, who wants to be sitting next to a 60 year old hag with an personality problem decades down the road?

Not me. If people start focusing on "affection" instead of "perfection" then they can have someone who shows them daily that they love them rather than someone who is essentially putting on a masquerade.

Although that's what we should all ultimately crave, it's still okay to continue to date hot women in the meantime, right? Even if they are shallow and/or selfish? I'm just asking for a friend. :)

Junk Merchandise

by RaSul Tahir Hijaz El

The Gestational Human Being is a product of Fire and Earth (to include Water as a medium of eternal desire (sunlight) and Air as a Vapor [Oxygen]. Water activates Fire and Fire activates Water to cleanse and release the properties of Earth and Air (Food and Intelligence) which are healing – not magical. Fire and Air without Water brings Earth into alignment with Metal (Wealth) to absorb Water for a now combustible Mixture called Radiance: The Healthful Body Eternal (Peace: Extreme discipline) – the result of reaction to injury.

For example:
It is not possible to sell used (refurbished) or “junk merchandise” (thrift goods, services, expenditures) for promotional earnings and viable stability unless damages to the productive utility of industry denoting pure profitability – on loan guarantee by the world at large at liberty (First Creation) – suffers or causes a collapse (rioting) to prioritized ingenuity (looting) within those differences (boundaries) existing now without balance and where settlement of account in the repayment plan of a qualified demand constructs an effect of catastrophic debt (joblessness) in the wake of such (re)cognition. The World of First Creation Wants and so It Has and so It Does first. Priority is given to that and those whom are: Which Is Essential (to its Being [1st Creation] – with utility and property on sustainable loan because debt is not an issue where That [2nd Creation] is a(n) manageable orchestration. Debt is a resource that is not owed though it does belong and is open to choice.). Zero cannot be allowed to exist where continuous debt (patterned after "financial obligation" but not restricted to this limitation. . .) is not apparent given that a structure of rational accounts (competitive offspring) is named in a world of first creation. When debt is caused to over-extend itself and exert force, spontaneous magic occurs as a defense for the elimination of the disallowed resource on record. Thusly, a world of second creation (magical opportunists) will not be allowed to exist where reaction to its/their status on permit to permanence requires a net resource of futility to support a handicap that DOES NOT EXIST for Homo Sapiens in a World of First Creation. Those events known to be predatory upon the support to known first creation talents will be robbed of their methods. This is to say: A problem oriented game which seeks no solution will not be entitled (clarified).

 For Example:
 A Man Which is not "GOD" –
 : [. . . The "What" and "Why of His likes and dislikes where He is Acceptance of Nature in acceptable apprentice to Himself as Creation . . . He is not delusional. He is not psychotic (a medic) in His departure from that which is vacant.]
 will interrupt His way and become DEATH [Void] as He increases His trespass upon free will.
 The hardest way to health (communism) by way of no choice options

(desolation) – where burgeoning intellect (appropriate suspicion/diligence) is guided to the designed treadmills of known frustrations and misplaced joy (loneliness) – seeks Hell (dictatorial absence of trees) and failure as the function of those specific influences (Parental Nurturing) that, without compromise, are dependent upon a reflex reaction (remembrance) in the face of historical opinions that option the exhibition of contrary values to what is noted to possess wealth (stability). Real life should not want to be about bad luck and desperate planning. Judiciousness is the instinctive behaviour of Man, the fire-bringer, because such are his weapons and tools and industry. Man builds himself a nest (bed) and a home (tree) that are suited to his nature (creativity). The autonomous Human Being – when attacked – an organism in perfection upon the planet [An Earth minus one vessel] – requires-not. A disadvantaged shambling for his effort (efficiency) is denied by his vote that invents for himself a barrier of natural invisibility (cooked food) wherewith to spy upon (manage agricultural wealth) and compete against those natural (undiminished, Earthbound resources) convincing and normal (recognition of non-human and alien subterfuge) standards of over-reaching susceptibilities to (which promote) loss of vigor (ingestion and propagation of aggressive vegetation and/or pharmaceuticals) sponsored by his cohabitation with cooperative-uncooperative masters of spice, spoilage and spores – The Plant Kingdom and its motile bacterial entourage. The Drunken Master (exhaustion) – to continue 'his practice at practical invisibility – attempts by this result of denial (cooked food – i.e., that which equals REST) a return to Earth by Water – which 'he, The Satan God, is denied (the result of vegetative over ingestion: Alcohol) – and Metal (Wealth: weaponry) that cannot bear additional investment at that cost (intense labor without exercise, without instinctive imagination promotes lack of Fire which equals loss/lack of Peace) because the act of drunkenness inspires the sum of zero from which there is at last no return to birth (Oxygen), in time, for lack of Air (competency: Right Mind – Right Attitude).

Much like the creatures which inhabit the animal world, the Human Being, too, consolidates his approach to life through the time-wise development of instinctive behaviors that encourage him to participate with contending reality. In effect, instinctively, it is much easier to be somewhat more competitive when there exists – as a rule – completely competent dysfunction whereby the non-human stranger will not be able to grasp this concept of engineered weakness (because it, the alien opportunist or The Satan God, cannot eat and therefore cannot function while it is in competitive despair to that Human Being which is sentient, visible and sane because He represents the repeated attempt of terrestrial life to engineer an ordered food-chain that is dominated by a head or chief on display) which is designed to thoroughly incapacitate a skilled opponent which is dis-allowably aggressive by reason of invisibility or some other inane mechanism of violent approach to Reason (Man –The Human Being) – such as Spirituality: {The noted, but largely unobserved relationships between insects, larvae, seeds and trees which manifests itself as a heralded, dichotomous fixation which pledges an affinity for long-term survival of instructional measures regarded as necessary for required change (passive asset protection) where necessity (the thought process of, "Perhaps . . .") responds to environmental historical dictations (usually weather and migratory movement), while requirements for Man as a pacemaker (a manager and matter-of-fact engineer) for stable change insists on re-invention and/or elaboration upon a permanent set of rotating agricultural assaults (to include, in near time, building construction and their rudimentary equivalents – animal traps such as pits and snares) drawn from and upon fixed, logical returns of an outlay of investment property (Fire: tangible combustion theory and their variously known patent bugs) for the benefit of a developing (accountable) species – the Human Being(s).}

Used and Junk Merchandise must be burned else, as a result, they stagnate productivity and force disease (psychoses and additive drug abuse(s)) upon a manifestly Human Kingdom which makes its living by fat (traditional indigenous, not modified agriculture) and meat (flesh) and hunting (business and family). The unrivaled shelters of Earth, Fire, Water and Air, therefore, do not support war (sunscreen).

No More Tipping – Yae!!

Author Crystal Henderson
from Get Crystallized

Danny Meyer, founder of Shake Shack chain, announced that his restaurants will do away with tipping. He plans to pay his staff higher wages and pass the cost to customers by raising prices on menus. Will others take his lead? I don't know but I for one think its a great idea! Why? Well because I hate to know that waiters and waitresses pay is based on what change I decide to give them. I personally don't think that's fair. However I get the idea of tipping because it encourages those workers to do the very best they can for you in order to receive that tip but what about the workers who go above and beyond but they are faced with a jerk who's had a bad day and is treated with disrespect AND doesn't leave a tip? Or what about the people diners who feel that the server is now their personal slave for two hours who they can boss around simply because they are going to leave some sort of tip?

Maybe if the tips were nationally mandated and it had to be written on your final bill for you to choose from based on the quality. Perhaps that would make me feel better. Mainly because most people do not know how to tip or how much they should be giving and to who. There is no "tipping" class in high school that deals with financial courtesies, maybe their should be. I mean what do I give the pizza guy? What do I give the concierge at my hotel, or the guy who helps me with my luggage at the airport, and what in the hell do I give the person who brings out my food at the carside-to-go place??? I mean so darned confusing!! And if I get it wrong then my pizza may be late or they hate to see my car parked on the side waiting for my take out order. Is it the customer's fault that they don't know what to tip?

I'm just going to say it – I hate tipping!!

Because of this fear of being blackballed in the service industry, I now probably over tip. I find out the percentage then I add a dollar or two. I have had friends say "Wow, you're giving that much?" or I have had the pizza delivery guy stop and say with tears in his eyes "Thank you so much!". Should it be this way? Should patrons be stereotyped as a group of people who don't tip well so they get horrible service, which could perpetuate the bad tipping because they are pre-judged and get bad service. So why not just take it out all together. Waitresses don't worry about talking endlessly on a busy shift with people you don't know or care about simply to get a bigger tip. Wouldn't it be nice to make a decent wage and just have to deliver the meal to your table without having to be extra perky or funny or plaster a fake smile (with teeth) at the pervert looking down your blouse?

I would love not to have to think about what I should be tipping every single person I encounter on my vacation. Can I get to my hotel or eat dinner without having to think back to my high school algebra class? And can I have lunch with my friends without the inevitable Emily Post conversation on the etiquette of fine dining?

Unless the service industry as a whole follows the lead of the groundbreaking Danny Meyer, I suppose I will have to continue to over tip everyone. <sigh>
